By public transport

On the underground

Take the DLR (Docklands Light Railway) to Cutty Sark (Greenwich Maritime) station. Turn right out of the station and walk along Creek Road. Go over the bridge at Deptford Creek and keep going. You will see a large, terracotta and white student residence on your right (McMillan Student Village). At the bus stop, there is a gate on your right: go in (if it is locked ask in the office on the right to let you in) and the school is in front of you.

The walk from Cutty Sark station takes 10 minutes.

On British Rail

Take the train from Waterloo or London Bridge to Deptford (10 minutes). Turn left out of the station onto Deptford High Street. At the top of this road cross the main road and turn right, along Creek Road. You will then see a large, terracotta and white student residence on your left (McMillan Student Village). At the bus stop, there is a gate on your left: go in (if it is locked ask in the office on the right to let you in) and the school is in front of you.

The walk from Deptford station takes 10 minutes.

The walk from Greenwich station takes about 20 minutes.

If you prefer not to walk, turn left out of Greenwich station and walk to the next bus stop

- bus number 199 will drop you off outside the school in 5-10 minutes. Ask the bus driver for McMillan Student Village.

Be careful – the school is quite difficult to find, for three reasons:

- we are not on the street so you can only see the building if you are standing at the gate between the residences;
- because we are an international school, not many people in the local area know us;
- it is a relatively new building and not even marked on most maps.

So the best thing to do is aim for the terracotta and white residences of the McMillan Student Village: the school is right in the middle of this site.

By car from the M25

Take the M25 to Junction 3, follow the A20 to London. Follow signs to Greenwich, drive through Greenwich, then bear left after the church (the road bears to the left with a restaurant with a yellow sign “Tai Won Mein” in front of you). You are on the A200 Creek Road. Go over the bridge at Deptford Creek, and you will see the terracotta and white residences on your right. As you reach these, turn left down Creekside. Park where you can, and walk back to Creek Road. Cross the road. By the bus stop, there is a gate: go in (if it is locked ask in the office on the right to let you in) and the school is in front of you.

By car from central London

Pick up the A200 at London Bridge and drive through Bermondsey, Rotherhithe and Surrey Quays. Stay on the A200, which eventually becomes Evelyn Street and then Creek Road. As you go past the terracotta and white student residences on your left, there is a right turning called Creekside. Park where you can, and walk back to Creek Road. Cross the road. By the bus stop, there is a gate: go in (if it is locked ask in the office on the right to let you in) and the school is in front of you.

If you need to park inside the site and have asked us for permission to do so, please turn left/right immediately before the residences, down a side street called Stowage next to The Duke pub. Follow the road round the back of the residences until you come to a metal gate on the left. Stop the car, get out and press the button for “Bellerbys College”. When you are let in, park in one of the spaces directly in front of the school.
